ICDL Iran Participates in New Curriculum for Digital Skills as Part of Literacy Training

A new curriculum for literacy learners within the Literacy Movement Organisation of Iran has been introduced by ICDL Iran this year. Starting in spring 2014, the e-literacy programme is intended to teach basic computer skills and knowledge to adult learners who are illiterate. Consultations on the programme have been carried out through several workgroups, and the course will run initially as a pilot in five provinces. The results of the pilot stage will be collected, and if successful, the project could be implemented in additional provinces.
